

Press,

Mark Neumann won today's debate with Scott Walker at the Wisconsin State Fair! The debate was aired on radio 620 WTMJ and hosted by Jeff Wagner. It proved three important points, heading into these final weeks before the September 14 primary.

- 1. Mark Neumann once again outlined his detailed conservative plan for Wisconsin. Mark has a record as a principled conservative leader and has a plan to cut government spending by over $2 billion and reduce taxes by 24% over eight years to create 300,000 jobs. But, Mark's plan goes further and ends the good old boy system with ideas like term limits to get rid of the career politicians. His plan will bring us back to Constitutional government. Mark has fought against ObamaCare - delivering over 25,000 anti-ObamaCare petitions to Governor Doyle - and has always been in favor of Arizona's immigration law. Mark is also opposed to Doyle's stimulus train and will immediately stop this project dead in its tracks.
- 2. Mark shined because we need someone who's run a business for 26 years - not another career politician. His answers were direct, detailed, and avoided the sloganeering that's become so common place from career politicians. Mark Neumann has consistently provided detailed plans and real solutions to the problems Wisconsin faces, while career politicians spout all the same old cliches and rhetoric.

 - Mark has a plan to make Wisconsin children the best-educated in the world
- 3. Mark has pledged to be the most open and accessible governor in Wisconsin's history - and it showed in this debate and throughout the campaign. Career politicians have made a mess of government in part because they're too often inaccessible and walled from public opinion. Debates - regardless of who you support - are a good thing because it gives the people an opportunity to hear out both candidates and make their own decision.

That's why Mark has conducted 16 town halls across Wisconsin and will continue holding them throughout the campaign. That's why Mark reads and responds to his 54,000 Facebook Fans—the most of any Republican candidate for Governor in the country - to stay accessible to the people. Both candidates are good men, and more debates are good for democracy.

Today's debate win was more exciting news for the campaign! The campaign is heading in to the final weeks and is poised to win, come November. So join us, and let's take back Wisconsin.
